Program

THE ARCHITECTURE OF NATURE explores the space where flowers become structure and nature becomes form. A branch reaching towards the light, a carved ornament on an ancient façade, a flower unfolding in perfect symmetry. Throughout this masterclass, we will explore these echoes and translate them into contemporary floral forms.

Day 1 – Observing Nature

The masterclass begins with an introduction to Studio Lilo's creative practice and approach to floral design. Through a curated presentation of botanical and architectural references, we will explore the hidden structures found within nature – from branching systems and organic rhythms to balance, proportion and form.

In the afternoon, participants will translate these observations into sketches and small-scale sculptural studies, using flowers and botanical materials to create their own contemporary interpretations of nature's architecture.

18H00: Private guided tour to Palazzo Massimo

Day 2 – Gathering Inspiration

Inspired by the streets, gardens, courtyards and architectural details of Rome, we will spend the morning observing the dialogue between nature and the built environment. Ornamental motifs, patterns, textures and proportions become a source of inspiration for the next stage of the process. Returning to our workspace, we will begin developing a collective floral installation. Together, we will refine the concept, define its composition and begin building the structural framework that will support the final work.

19H30: Rooftop cocktail reception at Six Senses Rome

Day 3 – Bringing Form to Life

The final day is dedicated to the realization of the installation. Building upon the structure created together, participants will work with botanical materials to add depth, movement and texture, allowing the piece to gradually unfold in space.

The masterclass culminates in a large-scale collaborative floral work, a contemporary interpretation of nature's architecture, translated into flowers, form and space.
